

About This Property

SVT founder George Lewis described the sight of Stone's Pond from Lincoln Road, looking across a huge meadow, as "one of the five-star landscapes in Wayland."

Hazel Brook and its surrounding areas are a prime example of the domino effect in land protection. Gifts from one or two landowners encouraged others to also protect land along the brook's course, starting with its headwaters and continuing in a patchwork of SVT-owned parcels and conservation restrictions as the brook flows toward the Sudbury River.

Features of Note

- Hazel Brook Conservation Area rewards your senses almost immediately by the sound of the rushing waters of Hazel Brook, soon followed by the sight of beautiful Stone Pond.
- Stone Pond, a man-made pond created by damming Hazel Brook, is enjoyed by skaters, birders, and fishermen.
- A figure-eight hike through Hazel Brook Conservation Area takes about one hour, but you can extend your walk beyond the property's boundary. A moderately easy hike uphill through the quiet woods leads you to a network of more than 65 miles of trails through Weston Town Forest and other public land.
- Stone walls indicate that the land was formerly used for agriculture, probably for the grazing of farm animals, as do the white pines that are filling in an abandoned field.
